You Are All Great

I have no other way to reach the Creator than through the society.

I have criticisms concerning the society and it seems to me that they are inferior to me, but I must believe that they are great, just like I believe in the greatness of the Creator.

I can criticize everyone and remain disconnected, or I can put myself into the society, even with force, and make an effort to join, so that together with my criticism of them, I can see the evil in me and ask that it be corrected. I examine whether my Kelim (vessels, desires) are corrected or not by the way the friends seem in my eyes, as good or bad.

I must see good in the friends in order to be in Kelim of bestowal, in order to attain equivalence of form with the Creator. I have no other way to reach the Creator. I can do it only through the society. And then I will begin to love the friends and respect them because they are my springboard to the Creator.
