The Beneficial Lie

How does one transform the importance of connection from a lie to the truth?

We need to lie to each other that the connection is important, until it transforms into real admiration. We receive the principles of connection from the writings of Kabbalists. They say that we must flood each other's brains with the importance of connection. In the meantime, that principle, for me, is a lie; but I relate to it above reason and insert it into my environment, into the society. If each one of us does this, and lies to the society about the importance of connection in his eyes, then each one will be included in it and the connection will really become important for us.
